Rules relating to the issue of bills, examination of bills presented, regularity of signatures, cancellation and currency specified under Chapter XXII M. C. A. C., Vol. II, apply equally in the case of these Cash Orders, also.

Treasury Cash Order lapses at the expiry of 3 months from the last day of the month of issue. It can, on payment of second commission, be renewed by the issuing Treasury for three months more, after which the Order will lapse to Government. This may, however, be revised on application to this office on payment of further commissions. Purchaser of a Cash Order may obtain payment for himself of its value, (but not the commission paid) at the Treasury at which he purchased the same.

Though Government do not guarantee to compensate a purchaser for the value of lost order, they will be prepared to institute reasonable enquiries, if the counterfoil is sent along with such an application. Treasury Officers should give wide publicity of the above scheme to the public by putting copies of the Notification both in English and Kanarese in a prominent place in all the Treasuries.
